

Annual Report, 2016-2017 – Thomas Fenn, SAS Bulletin Editor

---

A few new changes have already occurred in late 2016 and early 2017, and a few more are in the works for the coming year and beyond.

1. The College of Letters, Arts and Social Sciences (CLASS) at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and my home institution, has agreed to support printing and mailing expenses of the SAS Bulletin for all of 2017, and the first two issues of 2018.
2. Two new Associate Editors are joining the editorial staff of the SAS Bulletin, replacing editors who have moved on for various reasons.

Associate Editor, Archaeometallurgy (replaces Thomas Fenn):

Brett Kaufman

Assistant Professor

Institute of Historical Metallurgy and Materials

University of Science and Technology Beijing

30 Xueyuan Road, Beijing, China 100083

Associate Editor, Bioarchaeology (replaces Katy Meyers Emery):

Christine Lee

Assistant Professor

Department of Anthropology

California State University, Los Angeles

5151 State University Dr.

Los Angeles, CA 90032-8220

3. Components and then perhaps the entire SAS Bulletin will be moving to an online format. First on the list will be the Conferences Calendar, which is very time sensitive and which should be something people can check anytime, will be getting upgraded and transferred to the Website and/or Facebook page for the SAS in the very near future. Stay tuned for more on that, and for a potential full migration of the SAS Bulletin to an online format.
4. More too come soon!!
